Think newspaper!

The blackboard says "Think Newspaper!" and that's what the students in DeeAnn Rothenberger's East Jordan fifth grade class have been doing for the past few weeks. The end result was a newsy 37-page paper which was finished last week. The final step was putting all 37 pages in individual piles -- and then collecting the pages one by one, in order. At the end, 250 papers were put together with clasps. The paper included stories about everything from city council meetings to interviews with teachers and local dignitaries. There was even a front page story headlined "Man bites dog." Next week the students will wrap up their study of newspapers by visiting the Charlevoix County Press and Gregg Publications. Sex ed group approved

EAST JORDAN - The Board of Education Tuesday night approved an administrative request to establish a committee on sex education.

The Michigan state legislature last year lifted a ban on sex education in public schools, but stipulated any sex education curriculum must be approved by the school board and a special advisory committee. "It is not mandatory that we have this type of instruction," said Superintendent Mel Rullman. "It is now permissible.."

Middle School Principal Doug Shields, the committee's acting chairman, stressed that establishment of the committee doesn't guarantee sex education will be taught in East Jordan.

He said committee members will study the issue and, if they think it should be taught, will develop a proposed curriculum for next fall.

"If we are met with community opposition or board disapproval, so be it," Shields said. "But nothing ventured, nothing gained."

"We want to make sure it's done properly, to give it the dignity it deserves."

Another clause in the new law says no child has to take sex education classes if his parents object to them.

The new committee already has several members, including the three principals, the superintendent, School Nurse Pat Green, teacher Jim Everest and Tuck Thompson, the middle school counselor.

Shields said more members are being sought and will include parents, three students and a clerygman. Anyone interested in being on the committee can contact Shields or Rullman at the administration office.

Shields said he has studied a sex education program in Charlevoix which is now in its second year. He described the materials used as "in good taste, but they got the point across."

The school board also heard a construction progress report from Construction Manager Mick Barney and John Jensen, the school's architect. Although students are in new and remodeled facilities this year, some parts of the building program aren't complete yet and probably won't be until next fall, they said.

Among the items still needed are locks and cabinetry. Jensen told the board their decision to get the school built as quickly as possible made some last minute problems more likely.

"The students probably gained the benefit of an extra year without being on half days (split sessions)," Jensen said. "You're paying for it now in terms of still having all these loose ends six months after the building was opened."

Good reception for downtown renovation

EAST JORDAN - If crowd turnout is any indication, the Chamber of Commerce proposal for renovating East Jordan's downtown is off to a good start.

In addition to Chamber board members, more than 25 business persons came to an informational meeting on the project Tuesday night.

All in all, the meeting confirmed what the Chamber board had hoped: that there is renewed interest in renovating the downtown and developing a common theme.

A six-member committee was appointed to further explore how to go about the renovation and to pick a theme. Committee members are Patricia Sweet, Vern Stark, Carol Tighe, Bruce Woodcock, Duane Chappuies and Clarence Weaver.

Most people at the meeting favored having some type of old-fashioned theme.

Bruce Janssen, owner of the Wood Shope in Boyne City, opened the meeting with a slide presentation showing examples of towns that have restored old buildings.

Janssen thinks businesses that "took what they had and enhanced it" look better and more authentic than those that cover up old buildings with fake fronts.

Pat Sweet agreed with Janssen that restoring the city's old buildings would be best. "It ought to be less expansive to enhance what we have and go from there - without making major structural changes," she said.

"The Jordan Inn is getting to be a real showplace," she said. "it's getting a reputation all over the state. And it would be nice if the people who come here remember that we have a Main Street that is really unique."

"Yes," said Jean Plite of Gemini Lanes..."But can we do it so it's not cutesy and artificial like Gaylord?"

Duane Chappuies explained a state break that could be available for business owners who remodel or rebuild. If certain requirements are met, tax assessments can be frozen for those businesses for 12 years.

Mike Burr, who works with a federal Housing and Urban Development program administered by the city, explained that low interest (3 percent) HUD loans may be available to help finance remodeling projects. There are a number of building code stipulations that must be met before a project would be eligible, he said.

Co-op recall stalled

BOYNE CITY - As the strike at Top O'Michigan Rural Electric Company moves towards its sixth month, a move to recall the Board of Directors has run into a roadblock.

Richard May, attorney for the citizens who started the recall drive, says the company claims a majority of its 32,000 customers must vote in person at a special meeting to recall the board.

It's very unlikely that approximately 16,000 customers will show up at a meeting, since the co-op covers 12 counties. But May has a different interpretation of the bylaws.

"My interpretation is that any member has the right to vote by proxy or mail," he said. May said it might be possible to get a circuit court order charging the co-op with misinterpreting the bylaws, but said he is awaiting instructions from recall drive leaders Bruce Sanderson and Ed May.

May added that the question of how an election would be held can't be faced until the company validates approximately 4,200 petition signatures it received in January.

May feels company officials are dragging their feet on validating the petitions. "They keep giving us dates when they say they'll have it done," he said, "but it's never done."

Meanwhile, the strike drags on, with the 25 office workers rejecting a company contract proposal last weekend.

"We all went out, we all go back," said strike leader Tom Schewe.

Schewe acknowledged that the 25 employees, weary of the long winter of cold picket duty and no paychecks, might be ready to make compromises on economic and other issues.

But the workers still say they should all get their old jobs back when the strike ends. Co-op officials refuse to promise this, saying the company won't fire the new workers hired to replace the union office workers, who went on strike October 19.

So the strike goes on. The office workers will be joined by union lineman, whose contract expires March 16. The linemen have not been working out of sympathy for the office workers, but will join the picket lines Friday.

The office workers will probably appreciate the help. Since they are so few in number, the strikers have many hours of picket duty each week. The workers rejected a company contract proposal last week 45-12, but Schewe says it probably would have passed if not for the stipulation prohibiting most of them from getting their jobs back immediately.

Schewe says the contract contained many items the strikers didn't like, such as one-man work crews, but added, "It would have passed, even though we would have taken a beating. People are sick of being out."

He said the proposed contract from the company called for average pay increases of eight percent, one percent lower than the settlement reached after a strike.

Asked when the strike will end, the union leader said, "I don't know. It could be a long time."

Ask help recruiting doctor

EAST JORDAN - Two members of the Family Health Center board of directors are circulating letters to Congressman Robert Davis asking for his help in getting another doctor for the community.

The town's only doctor, Klaus Hergt, told the health center board on Feb. 25 that he will be moving to Cheboygan when his contract expires June 1.

So board members Virginia Carey and Joan Romback are writing Davis. Specifically, they are asking his assistance in getting a doctor from the Public Health Service Corps.

The East Jordan health center requested approval from the federal government to recruit doctors from the public health corps. But that approval was not given because East Jordan was reportedly too close (15 miles) to Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Doctors in the Public Health Service Corps are required to work in medically under-served areas for a period of time in exchange for government financial aid while they were attending medical school.

Mrs. Carey said the letters are being distributed in many business establishments around East Jordan. She says anyone who might use the health center may sign the letter -- whether they are a resident of East Jordan or not.

"We just thought that sending in a lot of signatures would show we're really interested," Mrs. Carey said.

City will lose CETA funds when recreation director leaves

EAST JORDAN - If the city wants to have a recreation director after April 1, local funds will have to be used to pay for the position.

The city council learned last week that Jane Buxton, the current recreation director, will be leaving her job at the end of this month.

Her salary is paid by federal funds, but the Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) program under which she was hired will not continue to fund positions after the people now filling them resign.

Buxton is being paid $10,000 per year plus fringe benefits.

Patricia Sweet, chairman of the city council's Recreation Committee, said the committee hopes the city can afford to pay a new recreation director with other sources of money.

"We've got a good program going, and I hate to see it go down the drain," Sweet said. But, she admits, "I know the budget is going to be tight. I hope we can get it through."

The council's Finance Committee is now considering budgets for all city departments. Recommendations will be made for the city council to consider in late March or early April. The city's budget year begins April 1.

Buxton has been the recreation director since graduating from Michigan State University last summer. She has decided to take up nursing as a career, and she will be working as a nursing assistant and taking nursing classes in Petoskey. She also plans to marry Cliff Denay of Petoskey on June 23.

In her position as recreation director, Buxton helped organize programs for all ages -- men's basketball, women's volleyball, men's and women's softball, youth soccer, swimming lessons, children's movies and crafts and numerous other activities.

Bank to offer trust fund advice

Northwestern State Bank received approval for opening a branch office near Petoskey last week, but an accompanying announcement of new trust services will probably hold more significance for the bank's Charlevoix county customers.

Northwestern, which has East Jordan and Boyne City as its major service areas, will follow the lead of banks in Charlevoix and Harbor Springs in offering trust and estate planning services through a large Detroit bank.

The local bank will be contracting with Manufacturers National Bank of Detroit to provide trust services.

Robert J. Shade, vice-president and trust officer with Manufacturers Bank, will be making appointments and keeping office hours on a regular basis at Northwestern State Bank.

This new service will start in April or May, pending approval by the state Financial Institutions Bureau.

For the last two years, Shade has been working five to seven days a month in a similar arrangement with First State Bank of Charlevoix and Harbor Springs State Bank.

Shade told The Charlevoix County Press this week that he would be assisting people with trusts, wills, estate planning, employee benefit plans and Keough retirement plans.

"I meet with people -- either in their home or at the bank -- to determine their needs," Shade said. "I make recommendations, and they make up their own minds on how to invest their money."

Having large banks provide trust services for smaller banks is a relatively new idea, he said. About four years ago, the state legislature passed a law allowing such agreements to be made. This allows smaller banks to keep large trust funds they might otherwise lose if they could not provide trust consultation.

In the past, Shade said, a Boyne City or East Jordan person desiring to set up a trust might have gone to First National Bank and Trust or First State Bank and Trust of Petoskey. And once a trust has been set up at one of those banks, chances are that the person would start doing other business with those banks as well.

Shade said trusts are designed to hold assets such as stocks, bonds or large insurance policies for investment and later dispersal, often to a spouse or children.

Shade said he is often called to speak to business groups. He was a guest speaker for the Boyne Valley Lions in February, and he will speak to the East Jordan Rotary Club on April 3.

New office OK'd

The newly approved Northwestern State Bank branch office near Petoskey will be located 400 ft. north of the Holiday Inn on U.S. 131 highway. The office is expected to open in late summer, with four to six teller windows and drive-in facilities.

In a related development, bank chairman Charles McDowell reported that Northwestern has withdrawn its protest of an application by First National Bank of Petoskey to open a branch just outside of Boyne City.

The incorporators of a proposed Boyne City savings and loan institution had joined Northwestern in protesting the Petoskey bank expansion, but that group has not withdrawn its protest.

CLARENCE F. RABACH, COUNTY CLERK CLYDE CUNNINGHAM, CHAIRMAN

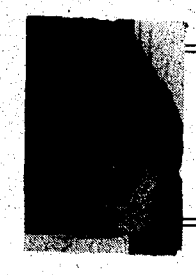

Here's what's cooking

St. Pat treats

WITH GINGER JACKSON

St. Patrick's Day is Saturday. What better way to celebrate the day than serving a popular Irish dish! Beef steak and Kidney Pie is so popular in Ireland that it is served in almost every pub.

You might say it is the equivalent of the great American hamburger. It's not only easy to prepare, but also delicious.

BEEFSTEAK and KIDNEY PIE

(serves 6)

INGREDIENTS:

Plain pastry dough
2 pounds round or flank steak, cut into thin 2" strips
4 lamb or veal kidneys
2 onions, sliced
¼ pound butter or margarine
2 cups boiling beef consomme
2 tablespoons flour
salt and pepper to taste
1 bay leaf
¼ cup chopped fresh parsley (optional)

DIRECTIONS:

Wash kidneys, remove skins and white core and cut into quarters. In a large skillet, melt butter, add onions and brown them slightly.

Toss the beef and kidneys in flour until well coated, then brown them in skillet with onions, stirring constantly. Salt and pepper to taste.

Add the consomme, bay leaf and parsley, cover and simmer until tender, about 1½ hours. Stir occasionally so gravy thickens. When done pour into a shallow casserole lined with half of the pastry dough.

Cover with the remaining pastry. Make a hole in the center to allow steam to escape. (If you have any left over dough, leaves and flowers can be cut out and placed on top for decoration.) Brush with beaten egg yolk if desired.

Bake in a 350 degree oven for about 30 minutes or until crust is nicely browned. Serve piping hot.

While the beef/kidney mixture is simmering, make the following:

PASTRY DOUGH

(enough for a two crust pie)

INGREDIENTS:

2½ cups of flour, sifted
1 teaspoon salt
¾ cup hard butter, margarine
4-6 tablespoons ice water

DIRECTIONS:

Into a large bowl, sift together flour and salt. Work in hard butter or margarine with a fork or pastry mixer, until flakey. Add 3-4 tablespoons of ice water and work mixture into a smooth ball with your fingertips. The pastry should hold together without being sticky. The less water used, the better. Roll into a ball, place in waxed paper and refrigerate for about 30 minutes.

To roll out:

Divide in half, place on a floured surface and roll gently with a floured rolling pin from the center out until it is ¼" thick.

Enjoy your Irish meal. Serving your beefsteak and kidney pie with guiness stout will really bring out the Irish in all of you!

Gasless weekends bad

Editorial

Yes, it appears the country may soon be faced with another serious gasoline shortage. Yes, the best way to keep the problem from becoming a full-scale crisis is to attack the problem vigorously before it gets out of hand.

But no, mandatory weekend gas station closing is not the proper means towards attaining this admirable result.

In the wake of a revolution in oil-rich Iran, Americans are again feeling the pinch on oil, a non-replenishable fossil fuel initially sought because it was relatively plentiful and inexpensive. Those were the days.

The country is now so dependent on petroleum-based products that any shortage poses a serious threat to the way our society operates. Too often, the government doesn't move quickly or boldly enough to nip problems in the bud. Political concerns or the checks and balances built into the democratic system often cause this.

But another danger, just as serious, is over-reaction. Forcing gas stations to close one or two days over the weekend would cause more problems than it would solve, especially in our area.

The shortage of gasoline could become a grave economic problem, but the solution isn't to force other economic problems on the people. In Northern Michigan we don't have the extensive public transportation systems of most metropolitan areas, so we depend on the automobile as our basic form of transportation. It's not a frill. It's a necessity.

If no gas is sold on Sundays, drivers will fill up on Saturdays. If the entire weekend goes gasless, motorists will fill up on Fridays. They will then proceed to use almost as much gas over the weekend, within their own area, as they ever did.

But in an area heavily dependent on tourism, lack of gas on weekends could be an economic disaster. For much of the year, Charlevoix County, with its skiing, lakes and other attractions, is a popular weekend spot for many visitors who live further than half a tank of gas away from us.

If these visitors are afraid they will be stranded here on Sundays with no gasoline until Monday, chances are many of them will simply stay home, using one tank of gas for recreational pursuits closer to home. Then they'll gas up again on Mondays to travel to work, often wasting gas on crowded expressways, one driver per car, all headed toward the same downtown destinations.

Instead of hurting the north country, which already has enough economic problems, the government should try solving the problem in the big cities where most of the gasoline waste occurs.

Why can't more urban expressways have strictly enforced car pool lanes? Why do so many urban areas have public transportation so ineffective that frustrated commuters feel forced to drive to work?

Why, in the midst of a threatened gas crisis, has rail transportation been dealt another serious blow with the announcement of reduced Amtrak service?

No, Northern Michigan residents shouldn't be permitted to dismiss the gas shortage as something for the big cities to worry about. But singling out tourism, the state's second biggest industry, isn't going to solve anything.

Perhaps a stiffer tax should be put on gas-consuming recreational vehicles and boats, which are so popular in the north. That way those who want to use gas for non-vital functions will still be able to do so, if they're willing to pay for it.

But the gas shortage is serious enough that it merits a search for careful, rational solutions.

The best way to ensure such action from our elected representatives is to let them know you are concerned. Drop them a line and tell them you hope they won't do anything to our economy without carefully considering all the potential harm they could cause by forcing gas stations to close on weekends.

Poor old crumpled George

Marshall Sayles

Take a dollar bill out of your hip pocket and finger it. Test its crumpy goodness; its non-tearing strength; its fine, old sleek solidness. Now bring it over here and we'll sit under this fig tree and reason together.

Be prepared now, for we are going to point. Look how George Washington has developed a bellyache. Notice how tired and half spent he seems. That's because your dollar bill is worth about 21 cents.

George began to draw the corners of his mouth down along about the time Sears Roebuck jumped the price of a dollar watch to two dollars; and when those 98 cent alarm clocks got wound up in inflation.

His face was put on the bill back when everybody worked; and when you got paid for exactly what you were supposed to have done -- the "good old days" when few people sat around waiting for the ravens to bring the bread. George was smiling then. A dollar was a dollar and nobody poked fun at the mythical sum printed across the face of the bill.

No, George doesn't like what he sees today. Such things as inflation setting in like relatives coming to dinner. It irks our hero that women have more bills in their bosoms, but less money to spend.

And he knows we have placed this inflationary problem at the feet of our politicians; and that they have kicked it aside while voting to increase their own salaries.

George also knows about the move to do away with the paper bill and issue small silver dollars. That's so our people will not notice the harried look on his face, and perhaps have more faith in a new, shiny American buck -- a political trick to make sour stomachs sweet again.

However, this will not cause anyone to believe they are no longer being fleeced. For when you go to the bank to borrow $1,000 you will still get only $210 -- the dollar being worth but 21 cents.

I went back into history and spoke to George about this. "Don't blame the bankers for inflation," he cautioned. "They just handle the money. Bankers are as honest as I was when I cut down that cherry tree."

"Come, now, George," I chided, "Our history books tell us that story is a myth."

"No more of a phony than the dollar bill is today," he said.

"When was a dollar really worth a dollar?" I asked.

"Back when we used to drink whiskey out of a barrel," he said.

"We don't do that any more. We're much more sophisticated today."

"I know," he said. "You're sophisticating yourselves into the poor house."

"That's another thing, George. We don't have poor houses today."

With that he gave off a loud "Ma!"

The kind of a "Ma!" that's got me worried sick.

Speaking out

Do you have a question, complaint or comment about the government? The best thing to do about it is to contact your elected representatives. They do read your mail and pay attention to voter opinion. Here are the addresses of elected officials serving the Charlevoix County area:

STATE REPRESENTATIVES - 103rd District - Ralph Ostling [R], R-2, Box 475B, Roscommon, Mich., 48653; 106th District - Steve Andrews [R], P. O. Box 241, Gaylord, Mich., 49735. Both men may also be reached by writing: House of Representatives, State Capitol Building, Lansing, Mich. 48901.

We need new bank

Editor,

It is a real shame that Northwestern Bank objects to the First National Bank from Petoskey moving into this area. What can they possibly be afraid of? Boyne City supports more than one grocery store, drug store, restaurants, service stations, auto dealers, real estate offices and maybe more businesses I don't know about. So again, why not two banks?

We have an account with First National Bank and welcome a branch down here, so we don't need to drive to Petoskey, if we don't want to.

It seems to us the main thing is people should have a choice. Until now, if people did not want to drive to Petoskey or Walloon Lake there was only one bank to deal with, and it is far more healthy for there to be a choice.

Mr. and Mrs. John Luebke
Boyne City

[Editor's note: A story elsewhere in this issue of The Press points out that Northwestern State Bank has withdrawn its protest of First National Bank's application to put a branch bank in the Boyne area. Last week, there was another story about a group of Boyne residents receiving preliminary approval for their application to start a Savings and Loan -- despite formal protests from Family Federal Savings and Loan and Northwestern Savings and Loan.

Responding to death

Grief: How it hurts

BY COLIN MURRAY PARKES

All of a sudden I felt there was nothing more to do. There's nothing. I'm so confused, so lost. . . . All of a sudden he passed away and I couldn't do anything more for him. The ambitions, hopes, and inspirations I had before seemed no longer important to me. . . . How am I going to live? What am I going to hang on to?. . . . I feel like somebody that just lost their arm or a leg or something. I just have to live without it. -- Interview with a twenty-five-year-old woman, six weeks after the death of her husband from cancer.

Grief is the reaction to the loss of a person or thing to which we have become attached. It is a natural and normal reaction that has a natural form and sequence.

It is, at times, intensely painful and frightening, and it may therefore be avoided, repressed, or distorted out of its natural form.

Psychiatric research indicates that attempts to deny or avoid grief are potentially harmful. It is important for people who suffer a loss to accept the need to grieve and for those who are in a position to help to encourage the bereaved to express their grief.

The reaction to a loss by death usually follows a predictable pattern, in the course of which the bereaved person makes real inside himself a situation that is already an established reality outside himself.

This process of realization and the acceptance of the full implications of the loss take time. "I can't believe it's true, it doesn't seem real."

NUMBNESS

The immediate reaction to death, particularly sudden or unexpected death, is likely to be one of shock or numbness. For a few hours or days the bereaved remain in a dazed state in which they can hardly react emotionally at all.

Numbness is followed by the onset of the pangs of grief, episodes of painful pining for the dead person. These reflect an intense wish to get the dead person back in some form or other.

Although the struggle to seek out the dead person is ultimately futile, this does not stop people from going to places and treasuring objects associated with the deceased. Nor does it prevent the survivors from going over in their minds the events that led up to the loss as if, even now, they could discover what went wrong and put it aright.

At times bereaved people will even experience a strong sense of the presence of the deceased. Sights and sounds may be misinterpreted as indicating his or her return, and vivid dreams occurring in a half-waking state may be recalled as apparitions: "I looked at him and he opened his mouth. I said, 'He's alive, he's alive. . .' When I woke up, I wondered where I was."

Since pangs of grief are precipitated by any thought or situation that brings the dead person to mind, some people attempt to avoid the pain of grief by getting rid of everything that reminds them of the loss and by filling their lives with frenzied activities to distract their thoughts.

Psychiatric evidence indicates that, far from preventing grief, such attempts only postpone it. When grief that has been delayed in this way does begin to emerge, it will be more painful and disruptive than grief that has been fully expressed at the time of the loss.

DEJECTION

As time passes the intensity and frequency of the pangs of grief gradually diminish, and the bereaved experience longer and longer periods of apathy and dejection. At this time the bereaved has given up the struggle to regain the dead person and has become fully aware of the gap between the world that had been taken for granted up to this time and the world that now exists. Life seems to have lost its meaning and to have become empty and flat.

RECOVERY

Only when unrealistic hopes have been relinquished do new beginnings emerge. Little by little the appetites return and people start to discover the world that is now possible for them.

Not that grief has an ending. Even years after a loss some reminder can again evoke a pang of grief or an episode of pining. But such pangs are less severe than in the past, and the memories of the dead person, though painful, become mixed with nostalgic pleasure.

Grieving is a way of relearning the world. It takes time, and because no two relationships are alike and no two worlds the same, each person goes through it in his or her own way.

For some the shock of a sudden, unexpected bereavement may trigger severe and destructive grief; for others, the timely and peaceful death of an aged parent may give little cause for grief.

For people who are liable to anger and self-reproach, there is a risk of becoming isolated by bitterness or self-punishment ("I never loved him enough when he was alive, now I will try to make up for this by grieving for him forever").

People who have become over-reliant on the deceased may find it hard to believe that they can survive without his or her support. "How am I alive after witnessing what I have done," wrote Queen Victoria after the death of Prince Albert, "I who prayed daily that we might die together and I never survive him." In such cases grieving can become an excuse for withdrawal from responsibility, for the mourner has been permitted by society to relinquish, for a while, obligations to work and accustomed roles in the world.

Grief may be complicated in a variety of ways, and some people need the help of a doctor or counselor when physical or psychological problems occur. There is even evidence that a few people actually die of a "broken heart," though this is unlikely unless they already have serious heart disease.

Bereavement may, however, aggravate a pre-existing physical or mental disorder, or it may give rise to fresh problems, pathological reactions, which are themselves distortions of the normal process of grieving. The commonest of these are delayed reactions, chronic reactions, and identification syndromes, in which the bereaved develops a hypochondriacal illness closely resembling the illness suffered by the deceased. Psychiatric treatments for these conditions are usually successful.

HELPING OUT

There are several ways in which we can all help bereaved people to grieve in a positive and healthy manner. In the early weeks they may need encouragement to express the feelings of distress, anger, bewilderment, and shame which are natural emotions; they are not signs of mental illness or stupidity as is frequently feared. Men in particular often feel that tears are unmanly, and they should realize that grief is a job of work that must be done.

Anxiety and tension are often a cause of minor physical symptoms, but this is no reason to demand tranquilizers and sedatives. Such efforts to avoid the pain of grief or dull the senses can sometimes delay or distort the grief response to the detriment of the survivor.

In the longer term bereaved people may also need permission to stop grieving and reassurance that duty to the dead is done. To the bereaved the world may seem very insecure, but with support from friends there is no reason why those who confront the reality of loss should not gradually find their way through to a new and rewarding life.

Beaver Island: Our Emerald Isle

BY CAROL J. WINDSOR

Sure, and if you happen to be winging your way over to Beaver Island Saturday, you'd be smart not to be wearing orange.

You see, me bucko, you'd be getting to America's Emerald Isle on St. Patrick's Day, and should you wear orange, nobody'd buy you a nip. You could get as thirsty as Paddy's pig taking a stroll in a peat bog before the day was out, and that's no blarney.

• • • • •

Irish settlers came to Beaver Island in the 1850's and 60's, driven from their homes by a potato blight which nearly wiped out their principal food supply and claimed thousands of lives.

According to the descendants of these Irish pioneers, the island reminded them of Ireland. There, they could continue fishing and farming, the two main industries of their homeland.

Whether it's the tone of voice, or the smile that can be heard as well as seen, there's a hint of a brogue in the native Beaver Islander's speech.

Bud McDonough, for instance, is a fourth generation Beaver Islander. He owns McDonough's Market, but don't expect it to be open Saturday afternoon.

"We'll be open in the morning for a while," McDonough said. "It's about a holiday over here," he said of St. Patrick's Day.

He and his family, like most islanders, will head for the Holy Cross Catholic Church for mass about 5 p.m. They'll stay for the potluck supper and dance that follows in the parish hall.

Last year, he and his wife had just returned from a two-week trip to Ireland. They had planned the trip for 25 years, McDonough said.

Irish visitors to the island had often said how much it resembled Ireland, and the McDonoughs wanted to see for themselves.

But to go to Ireland and return three days before St. Patrick's Day? To miss the biggest holiday in Ireland by just three days?

Not at all, said McDonough. "It's a holiday here too, you know."

A book should have been written about the characters who called Beaver Island home over the last century, McDonough said. All that remains of some are stories told over a glass of brew, fondly and with a twinkle.

One story, McDonough said, was of an old timer who made a bet with another that he'd quit drinking on Beaver Island until a certain date.

Well, he may have won the bet, but he won it more by wit than by staying off the grog.

Seems he'd row his skiff out a way and sit there, having a nip. Sometimes, McDonough said, he'd just wade into the waters off the island and, technically, he'd plead he wasn't on the island.

Another time, so the legend goes, he had somebody lift him up so his feet weren't touching the ground as he tippled.

That, and many more tales could be told if the Shamrock Bar could talk. For 35 years, it was owned by Archie LaFreniere, but 5½ years ago, it was bought by Barb Beckers and Betty Anderson.

They'll carry on the traditions of green beer and soda bread, mainstays on the St. Patrick's Day menu. "Drinkin' to one another's good health," as LaFreniere says, will be the main feature of the day there.

One memory of St. Pat's Day that continues throughout the remainder of the year, is green coins, brought to the island and the bar by a Traverse City man.

"All the next year I run across green money in Charlevoix," Ms. Beckers said. "It's fun to keep track of."

Halloween-type pranks spice the day, she said, and after such a long winter, there may be more than usual, although the last couple of years have been subdued.

The lumbering industry at the turn of the century brought Archie LaFreniere's French father to the island. He married one of the Boyle girls and they settled there.

LaFreniere's wife was one of 14 Conaghan children, also from the island. McDonough said at one time there were 13 Gallagher families on the island and none of them were related.

LaFreniere said the end of World War II brought a change to Beaver Island when the lure of big money in the automobile industry drew residents away from the island, much as it did throughout the north country.

Of his seven children, two remain on Beaver Island, but LaFreniere said he believes one may leave when he achieves his goal of becoming a paramedic.

St. Pat's Day is the feast day of St. Patrick, a Catholic missionary to Ireland in the fifth century who founded many churches and schools.

The shamrock is worn to honor St. Patrick who used its three-lobed leaves as symbols of the Trinity. One presumes that green is the color of the day because it is the color of the plant.

LaFreniere said green will be worn throughout the island Saturday. "They better not be caught wearing orange," he said.

Orange, the color, may not be bad in itself. However, Orangemen were an association of English Protestants sworn to support the Protestant succession to the throne of England.

Sources indicate societies still exist in the northern United States and Canada and they have an annual celebration to mark the victory of William III over the Catholic James II at the Battle of the Boyne, July 1, 1690.

About six years ago, LaFreniere remembers, Beaver Island's celebration of St. Patrick's Day gained national attention.

A member of a U.S. House of Representatives committee came to the island to see why the test results of Beaver Island public school students were so far above national norms.

A story on the findings was published, and without warning, a photographer and reporter from the New York Times arrived on the island – on St. Patrick's Day. They had come for a story on the schools, unaware that the Irish holiday was in full fling.

"They did write a story on the school, but that was back on the third or fourth page," LaFreniere said.

What hit the front page was a picture of the interior of the Shamrock Bar, and a story on St. Patrick's Day on Beaver Island.

Getting to the island this time of year involves a flight, probably via one of Welke Aviation's three airplanes, from Charlevoix, Pellston or Manistique. It's $13 one way, and the air strip is about a mile from St. James.

Betty Welke says St. Pat's Day means an end of winter and the beginning of spring to the islanders and holiday celebrants.

The flight takes about 15 minutes from any of the three airports, she said. Many from Chicago come via Manistique which is the same distance by air from Beaver Island as Pellston.

Mrs. Welke said their passengers cause them no problems. "They are usually pretty well-behaved," she said. "It's only 12 or 15 minutes to the island and they can contain themselves."

Best bet

The St. Patrick's Day weekend is traditionally the last big weekend of the ski season. A hint of spring can sometimes be found in the air, and St. Paddy's Day is always a good reason to celebrate. It makes a festive combination.

The Dilworth in Boyne City was the site of a massive St. Pat's Day party last year and big things are expected this year as well. There will be entertainment upstairs and down, as well as lots of green beer.

Just across the street from the Dilworth is the Boyne River Inn, another popular skier nightspot which will be jumping this weekend.

If you want to hear some Irish folksongs sung by a real live Irish troubadour, head up to Duffy's of Harbor Springs. That's where Sean Ryan, a native Irishman, will be singing and playing the music of his homeland. Ryan plays from 4-9 p.m.

How Boyne got its name

John Miller -- The founder of Boyne City named the community and river after a familiar river back in his native Ireland.

[Editor's note: In honor of St. Patrick's Day, The Press is running this story detailing how an Irish immigrant chose Boyne City's name.]

BOYNE CITY - It started in a dream.

Harriet Miller, wife of Irish immigrant John Miller, woke up one morning in Oswegotchie, New York, with the memory of a strange dream in her head.

In her dream she had envisioned a lake to the west that was shaped like a bear. Its shores were covered with pine trees and there was an abandoned cabin at the end.

Inspired by the dream, the Millers soon headed west and met a man in Northport, Michigan who told them of a nearby lake shaped like a huge bear. They journeyed there, landing at what now is the intersection of Lake and Michigan Streets, and at the end of the lake found an abandoned cabin.

At the end of the lake John Miller found a river that reminded him of the Boyne River in his native Ireland. The Battle of the Boyne is an important date in Irish History, marking a major victory of William the Orange over Irish Catholics.

Since Miller was the first settler in the area, he could call the river whatever he wished. He named it after the river in Ireland, and the town was named after the river.

And that's how Boyne City got its name.

SURVEY QUESTION

Do you think the city of East Jordan should spend $70,000 to renovate the back of the senior citizen center to be used as a community center?

Of 10 people called, six said no, and four said yes.

Here are some of the comments from people who said no:

The city should take the money and give us townspeople a rebate on the damn high water bills we have been paying the past few years.

$70,000 is a lot of money and it could be used on the streets where it is much more needed.

I'm wondering where the city came up with $70,000.

There are too many more improvements to be made in this town first.

The city should build a youth center out of town with a lot of recreational functions provided.

The senior citizens need a new building just for them, not a place for the whole town. We older people need more to occupy us, not the younger folks. They can do more for themselves.

Here are some of the comments from those who said yes.

It is an excellent idea. We need a community center but it should be built in a bigger area near town. There isn't enough room now for parking on Main Street.

Yes, but first the city should buy up some property for parking area.

It's about time we get a center for all the townspeople.

Anything to better the community, I'm all for.

Next week's question: What do you think about the idea of remodeling downtown stores with an old fashioned theme?

EAST JORDAN - Rev. Dale A. Turner was ordained Sunday morning, Feb. 18 in the Missionary Church, where he is pastor.

The rite of ordination was conducted by Rev. M. Joe Jones, Michigan District Superintendent. Rev. John E. Tuckey, Rev. Fred Becknell and Rev. Ray Moore joined Jones for the final prayer of consecration.

Rev. Becknell, pastor of Marquette Missionary Church, Rev. Turner's former pastor prior to entering the ministry, shared the pastoral prayer.

FREE CONTOUR ANALYSIS EXAMINATION FOR VICTIMS OF CHRONIC OR ACUTE PAIN

The International Pain Control Institute in conjunction with New York Chiropractic College is presently engaged in what is the most extensive research program ever undertaken by the chiropractic profession. This research is directed toward determining the relationship between health problems and spinal misalignments and utilizes a screening process called Contour Analysis.

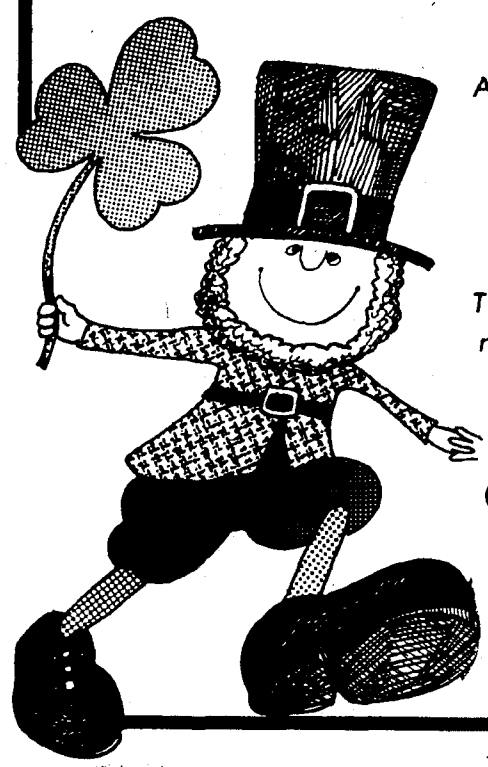

Volunteers are being sought for screening. Contour Analysis enables taking a three-dimensional picture (called Moire photography) of the topography of the surface of the spine to detect spinal stress deviations. This analysis will be correlated with leg deficiency, patient symptomatology, and levels of spinal tenderness. An analysis of this type can reveal such things as normal and abnormal stress patterns, spinal curvature, muscle spasms, muscle imbalance, spinal distortions, and scoliosis.

There is no charge to participating volunteers, since the doctors are contributing their time, service, and facilities for the program. Final processing and evaluation will be done at the New York Chiropractic College.

Anyone wishing to be a volunteer may telephone participating doctors directly for information or an appointment.

Bargain hunting time is here again

Auctioneer Jim Brannon tells folks about the good deals on hand at a recent auction. With spring just around the corner, bargain hunters will be able to keep busy at various sales. [Press photo by Carol J. Windsor.]

BY CAROL J. WINDSOR

Furniture, pictures, dried and plastic flowers, lamps and treasure boxes dotted the snow piles as the auction began.

About 200 hardy souls braved the flurries for assorted household goods at the Walloon Lake cottage, formerly owned by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Minor Saturday.

Before it was over, some four hours after it began, the frostbitten few who remained had shivered through several hundred items, now won by brave bidders at one of the few outdoor winter auctions in the area.

Maybe the goods weren't the sort of thing you'd want in your living room -- like the ages-old, moth-eaten moose head that went for $250 to the owner of the Mitchell St. Pub, Jerry Ellman.

Maybe they weren't all bargains -- like the gut-strung pair of snowshoes that went for $45.

"You can buy them for that new," one observer said.

Auctioneer Jim Brannon responded, "These are better than new. They're used."

Cars lined Lake Shore Drive as bargain hunters dressed for the Arctic filed in to view the booty. Boxes full to the brim yielded glasses and brass candlesticks and bent plastic flowers and mysterious containers.

Gradually they were lifted into the waiting arms of the lucky bidders and headed for a new fate.

Brannon said the auction went well. He marshalled the bids with the leadership of a jocular General Patton.

The new owners of the home, Sally and Dave Schnorf of Toledo, watched the bidding with mixed feelings. Some of the items they had hoped to keep, things like proch furniture and a dresser.

Most of what had been in the house they hadn't been able to use, they said.

In particular, they remember the stuffed head of a buffalo that hung from one of the walls. It had green teeth, which appalled Mrs. Schnorf.

It wasn't one of the items to be auctioned. Apparently the owners had wanted to keep it for themselves, she said.

IN SAD MEMORY of our loved one, Artie D. Morris, who passed away one year ago. On March 8, 1978, he went home to be with the Lord. We miss him more than words can tell. This poem (author unknown) helps us carry on as he would have us do:

• • • • •

If you would please me when I've passed away
Let not your grief embitter you, be brave
Turn with full courage from my mounded grave
And smile upon the children at their play
Live on as you have lived these many years
Still let your soul be gentle and be kind
I never liked to see those eyes in tears
Weep not too much, that you must stay behind
Share in the lives of others as you'd share
If God had willed to leave me there.

Devils should get better

EAST JORDAN - The Red Devil basketball future looks bright, but Coach Steve VanderHyde says this summer will be the key to "how bright."

East Jordan lost a 60-56 district tournament game to Charlevoix last week to end the 1978-79 season with a 12-8 record. Next winter, three starters will be back from that team, and they will be joined by a potent group of sophomores who ran up a 17-2 record on the junior varsity this year.

That sounds like next year could be even better than this year. "But that depends on how much the guys want to work in the off-season," VanderHyde said.

"I know the sophomores are going to practice all summer, and they'll be pushing the juniors if the juniors don't work, too."

VanderHyde is planning to hold a summer basketball camp and he will also be trying to organize scrimmage games with other schools.

VanderHyde said his first year of varsity coaching was "really enjoyable."

"I'd have to say the high point would be the Harbor game," he said, referring to the Red Devils' first victory over Harbor Springs (on the Rams home court) in seven years.

That victory helped East Jordan to an 8-4 Ski Valley Conference record, which was good for third place behind Harbor Springs and Gaylord St. Mary.

VanderHyde said the district loss to Charlevoix was a disappointment. "If we would have beaten Charlevoix, it would have meant the district championship, because we could have beaten Rogers City, too." Charlevoix downed Rogers by 13 points in the district finals.

But, he said, the Charlevoix loss -- and others -- could be attributed to the Red Devils' youth and relative inexperience.

"At times in the Charlevoix game, we had two sophomores and two juniors on the floor, while they had four seniors," he said.

East Jordan had four seniors on its entire squad this year -- Jeff Burch, Dan spence, Dennis LaPeer and Darryl Christensen.

Burch and Spence were the starting guards and won't be easy to replace. Burch led the team in scoring with a 15-point average, while Spence, an excellent ball handler and passer, was the team's playmaker.

The team's three "big men" will all be back. Center Duane Carpenter, a 6-4 junior, was the second leading scorer and rebounder, and 6-3 forward Duane Cutler was the top rebounder and third leading scorer. Tim Kraemer, a 6-2 forward, will also return, as will top reserves Dan Goebel, Don Trojanek and Kelly Looze.

Sophomores Del Ingalls and Jerry Fuller played with the varsity near the end of the season and both performed well. Fuller scored 12 points while playing only half the game against Charlevoix last week.

Volleyball future looks bright

BOYNE CITY - The high school volleyball team recently concluded its season with a 6-6 record, and Coach Pat Upton said she sees bigger things next season.

The Ramblers were put out of the state tournament in a pre-district elimination match against Interlochen, which beat them two out of three games. "They were real good that night," the coach said of Interlochen. But Charlevoix, a team Boyne City beat early in the season, later beat Interlochen to win the district championship.

The volleyball team is losing just three seniors, starters Sara Bricker and Ginni Scott and substitute Kathy Watkins. Another starter, ace server Kathy Furton, is moving to California.

Coach Upton says her team improved rapidly during the season, showing better spiking skills and position play. "Instead of just standing in one spot, she knew where to move to cover a spike or a block," she said.

Part of the improvement was due to the help given the team by Rick Pethers, a new resident of the community who has played and coached volleyball.

The highlight of the team's season came early when they took second place in the Charlevoix Invitational Tournament. But while the Ramblers improved, "So did the other teams," Upton said.

One of Boyne City's problems was lack of depth, since there were only eight players on the varsity. Upton said she is hoping for a better turnout for the team next year.

"I'd really like to see more people at least give it a try," she said. "We had a lot of fun this year."

League leaders get a scare

The co-leaders in the Tri-City Basketball League, B&C Market and FBT Industries, both won close games Sunday to stay at the top of the pack.

B&C nipped Boyne River Inn 79-76, snuffing out a late rally. B&C led 57-44 after three quarters, found themselves outscored 28-18 in the fourth quarter, but held on to win. Dave Peck led the scoring for B&C with 18 points, while Ken Gahn and Brad Upton both added 12. Chuck Stanek pumped in 29 points for BRI, while Bill Anzell and Kim Hocquard both had 16.

FBT stayed in first place by edging 3-M Gas by two points in a game that was ended about 30 seconds early due to a technical foul against 3-M. League rules state that a team forfeits a game after being assessed its third technical foul. Details on the score were not available.

Northwestern State Bank took over sole possession of third place by beating Sir Jack's 80-68. The bank trailed 41-31 at halftime, narrowed the margin to 51-49 after three quarters and won with a 31-17 advantage in the fourth period. Al Looze led the bank with 30 points, and Jeff Belford tossed in 23. Jeff Kruzel collected 25 points for Sir Jack's, while Tim Crego added 17.

East Jordan Iron Works bombed Charlevoix County State Bank 121-60, as Mike Riedle poured in 39 points and Kevin Griffin had 36. Ed Roberts led the bank with 14 points, while Rick Roberts chipped in 12.

Stevens Concrete rallied for a 19-10 fourth quarter advantage to nip Parrish Chevrolet 73-70. Ken Doty led the winners with 19 points, and Bob Nemecek had 13. Tom Beyer tossed in 23 points for Parrish, and Dale Tims added 20.

Revised tannery plans

Developers want to build up, not out

BOYNE CITY - The revised plans for the proposed tannery condominium development on Lake Charlevoix features fewer but taller buildings in an effort to increase the amount of space left for grass and schrubbery.

In addition to moving the proposed public swimming beach from the southwest end of the tannery property to the northeast end, the new plan calls for 65 buildings instead of the 110 proposed in the original plans.

"We have clustered the housing a little more near the water," developer Dave Smith told The Press. "That opens up even more green belt. It's much more attractive."

The new plan eliminates one-floor units and calls for more two and three story buildings.

The revised plan for the 60 acre parcel of property calls for 270 units, up from the original 250. "The additional 20 units would enable us to justify the cost of the things we have to do," said Smith, referring to the road the developers must build for Boyne City to replace Front Street.

The developers still say Front Street must be closed for their project to be a financial success. That's the part of their plan that has stirred up opposition among local residents who don't want to see the lakefront street closed.

A new plan became necessary when the Army Corp of Engineers told city officials that the original site offered for a beach won't hold sand unless five to seven breakwaters are built into the water.

Those breakwaters would have cost $10,000 each, and the city was hoping for $10,000 in grant money from the Department of Natural Resource's Land and Water Conservation Fund. But the additional breakwaters needed made the project much too expensive for the city, so the city withdrew its grant application in late January.

The developers, Lake Associates, then approached the present owner of the tannery property and offered to buy four acres of property, including 900 feet of beachfront, northwest of the land on which they hope to build the condominiums.

Boyne City had been hoping to buy the nine parcel lot to develop as a park with financial help from Lake Associates. The developers now plan to build condo units on the property initially proposed for the beach. They say putting the buildings closer to the water will also give drivers along Division Street a view of the lake.

Under the original plan, the taller buildings near the back of the property would have blocked the water from view.

Lake Associates says it has a verbal agreement with the property owners to buy the additional property for the public beach. Dave Smith refused to say how much it would cost.

The city will seek DNR grant money to help develop the new beach, which City Manager Tim Clifton said would cost approximately $53,000.

The Smiths still have an option to buy the rest of the tannery property, approximately 55 acres. That option expires in June, but Lake Associates could renew the option again.

At least two of the city's five commissioners say the new site plan probably won't keep them from supporting the project. "I think it's stupendous," said Catherine Jessup. "The city's basic requirements have been met."

She said she was excited about the revised plan because of, "The amount of green area and the imagination that's gone into utilizing the water."

Commissioner Steve Moody said, "My first impression is that what they do on the property is of little concern to me. I'm more concerned about the roads."

"I haven't changed my mind at all. I'm still for the project."

In a related development, a group of citizens opposed to closing Front Street sought to have Circuit Court Judge Michael Breighner dismiss the Smith's and city's petition to close the road.

Court permission is needed to close any public road near a body of water. The motion said the developers had waited too long to bring their final plans before the court.

But City Attorney Harvey Varnum said he hadn't been notified and asked that the motion be continued to April. The judge granted the request, but the complaintants say they will drop the motion because Lake Associates is now publicly moving on the project again.

City millage cut suggested

BY KAY SEVERINSEN

BOYNE CITY - Reduced millage and increased services highlight the proposed 1979-1980 budget submitted to the Boyne City Commission Tuesday.

The total budget of $1,533,600 is 10.8 percnt higher than last year's, yet taxpayers will pay 2.18 mills less than in 1978. This means taxpayers will pay $20.02 per $1,000 of assessed valuation. Assessed valuations in Boyne City increased by 6.5 percent this year, however.

"The budget has never been done this way before," said City Manager Tim Clifton, who began work on the 151-page document in early December.

"We reviewed each line item in depth. Some items were overbudgeted last year and the city has a surplus now," Clifton said. "In other cases, department accounts were combined or eliminated."

Because of such cuts, the operating budget was reduced by seven mills.

But 4.72 mills was added for a new capital improvement program that will provide $112,000 for maintenance of city streets; water and sewer mains, street signs and sidewalks.

In addition, the budget provides $25,000 for a new city comprehensive plan, which administration officials have been pushing for months.

The plan, Clifton said, is "the single most important project confronting the city. It is necessary if Boyne City is to administer and control its future development."

Clifton stressed that despite the reduced millage, city services would be maintained at the current level. Additional monies are provided for the library, Rotary Park and for the establishment of uniform personnel and purchasing systems.

The city commissioners were impressed with the detailed budget format.

"This budget," said Commissioner Catherine Jessup, "has set a high standard for professionalism for our city. I'm proud to be associated with you (Clifton) and these plans for Boyne City's future."

Copies of the budget are available at City Hall and at the Public Library.

The public is invited to attend any of the eight budget review sessions scheduled for the coming weeks. The budget will receive final approval at a public hearing April 10, and will take effect May 1.

New rep learns ropes

[Last in a special Press series on our new legislators.]

Capital Correspondent

LANSING - State Rep. Steve Andrews could be called "tight with money." The people's money of his district, that is.

The Wolverine republican for the 106th District said his constituents did not send him to the capital to have their money spent to get him re-elected next term.

"I will not spend their money for my incumbency program," said Andrews, whose district includes the Boyne Area and Walloon Lake.

Andrews' office is conservative enough to prove this.

His entire staff consists of his secretary and himself. He doesn't have any aides, but is recruiting volunteers to help with the paper work, he said.

Andrews plans to operate his office on a cost-value process.

He is trying to refine his office in order to get "the best output value for what is spent," he said, "I'm super cost conscious. Every nickle and dime adds up," he said.

One quirk Andrews has is the massive waste he sees going on at the capital.

He has sent several notices reminding his co-workers that they should use both sides of a sheet of paper when sending memos.

Xerox copy machines that will copy on both sides of the page are available, [redacted] to waste because [redacted] side, he [redacted] automobile salesman, is on the Republican Task Force on Cost Efficiency which deals with cost problems.

He is happy with his other assignments on the Education Committee, the Judiciary Committee, the Senior Citizens and Retirement Committee, the Military and Veterans Affairs Committee and he is vice chairman on the Marine Affairs Committee.

"If given a choice (on committee assignments), the Conservation Committee would have been my first pick because of the tremendous amount of resources and land we have in our district that is directly effected by this committee," he said.

The Taxation Committee would have been another primary choice because of the concern Andrews, a former small businessman, has that taxation has on self-proprietors, he said.

The former Navy medic "loves" his position as state representative because of the opportunity it provides to have a positive effect on the people of Michigan and especially those in his district, he said.

Andrews, his wife Karen and their seven-month old son, Dana, make the three and a half hour drive twice a week in order to keep in close contact with his district.

They leave their home in Wolverine Monday morning to arrive in Lansing in time for the night session and leave Lansing late Thursday afternoon to go back home.

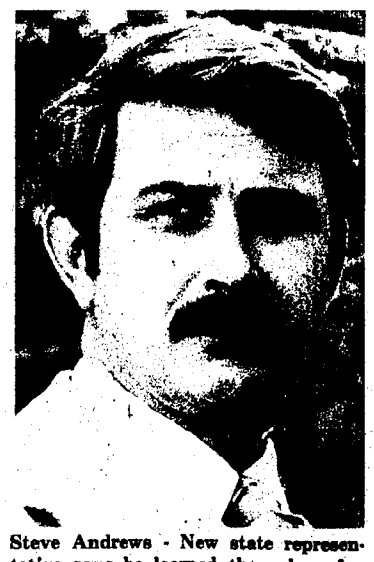

During the week they live in their rented apartment in Lansing.

Although Andrews has not proposed any bills on the House floor, he is working on a motorcycle safety education bill.

"The bill would mandate anyone who buys a motorcycle to take a state prescribed course on motorcycle safety," he said.

"A high number of (motorcycle) accidents involve drivers with no motorcycle education. A background of education would serve as a chief combat against unnecessary accidents."

The Highway Safety Office and the State Board of Education are presently working with Andrews to help with the funding and setting up where the courses would be offered.

Steve Andrews - New state representative says he learned the value of a hard-earned dollar as a small businessman.

Andrews is opposed to both land use legislation and wetlands legislation, but would have to see the final bills before making any last judgments, he said.

"The state's authority should be as a resource point with the ability to supply technology and scientific data," he said, "But the final say (for land use) should be at the county level."

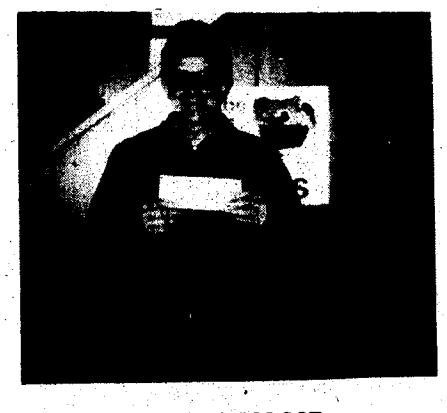

Andrews said the state does not have the close feel for the economic and social needs of northern land owners.

Prior to wetland legislation coming up for a floor vote, Andrews feels there should be an inventory to determine how much of upper Michigan is wetlands.

"Nobody knows what are wetlands and how much there is in Michigan. There is no way we can solve the problems without knowing what the problem is," he said.

This is one example of a non-profit group making use of the Save-Share Program to help raise funds. There are many more groups using it too and there will be a picture of one each week in this paper.

Glen's wants everyone in East Jordan to know about Save-Share and hopes more groups will use it to raise funds.

All a group has to do is register with the Store Manager and begin saving the green cash register tapes. Glen's will pay 1 percent of the total qualified amount of all tapes brought in by any registered group; and not just once, but each time a group brings in $25.00 worth of slips or more.
